Alternatives to Guardianship

Guardianship is the legal court proceeding which grants one person (the guardian) power to make legal decisions for another (the ward), thereby removing the right of decision-making from the ward. Removing a person’s rights should only be done when absolutely necessary.

Often the decision to seek guardianship is made for minors with disabilities who are approaching adulthood or elderly persons who have acquired a disability as they’ve aged. In both cases, the family is generally acting from genuine concern for their loved one; however, removing someone’s rights makes them vulnerable and powerless. Most people with a disability are able to take care of their own lives without a guardian.

Creating a person-centered plan for people who may need assistance in decision-making is a good way to prepare everyone—the person with a disability and the family—for the next stage in their lives. This might include executing documents such as a Release of Information, Advocacy Authorization or a limited Power of Attorney which will allow someone else to be involved in decision-making only to the degree necessary without stripping the person of their legal rights.

Supported Decision-Making is a process in which guidance and advice are given to a person in making their own decisions. This may involve any number of people involved in the person’s life providing input.

An experienced attorney in the field can help families explore other options and make a more informed decision.

Dohn Hoyle, a respected leader in the disability rights movement, has been advocating for alternatives to guardianship for more than 30 years. In his paper, Reflections on Autonomy, Hoyle states, “It is not permissible to remove persons’ rights for the crime of having a disability or the crime of aging and gaining disabilities. Our status as a person or a citizen shouldn’t change due to either circumstance. We should not be relegated to losing our “inalienable rights.”

October is National Disability Employment Awareness Month!

The 2019 National Disability Awareness Month theme is “The Right Talent, Right Now.” The theme emphasizes the essential role that people with disabilities play in America’s economic success, especially in an era when low unemployment and global competition are creating a high demand for skilled talent. U.S. Secretary of Labor, Alexander Acosta, said, “Every day, individuals with disabilities add significant value and talent to our workforce and economy. Individuals with disabilities offer employers diverse perspectives on how to tackle challenges and achieve success. Individuals with disabilities have the right talent, right now.”

EMPLOYMENT RELATED WORKSHOPS

Employee Disclosure:
What to do when an employee discloses a disability

This workshop is designed to help employers understand their responsibilities when an employee discloses a disability. Discussion topics will include employment provisions of the Americans with Disabilities Act, under what conditions an employee must disclose a disability, why they may not want to, and how to determine what a “reasonable accommodation” in the workplace is.

This event is free and open to the public. Please register online at bit.ly/EmployeeDisclosure2019 or contact Miranda at (269) 345-1516 x120.

Back to School for our Pre-ETS staff!

Everyone is back to school, including our Pre-Employment Transition Services (Pre-ETS) staff. Disability Network Southwest Michigan offers a number of programs centered on providing valuable training and experience to youth and young adults with disabilities, whether they are transitioning to employment or continuing their education.

Moving from a familiar high school environment to a post-secondary or trade school can bring a new set of expectations and stresses. We work with students to help them learn how to ask for accommodations and establish routines that will make their school experience successful.

We also offer school-to-work training programs for young adults with disabilities in both group and individual settings within schools. The curriculum focuses on pre-employment transition services aimed at getting students ready to enter the working world; topics include career exploration, employment soft skills, self-advocacy and financial literacy & budgeting.

What is the Student Earned Income Exclusion?

The Student Earned Income Exclusion (SEIE) is a Supplemental Security Income (SSI) work incentive that allows certain individuals with disabilities who are under age 22 and regularly attending school to exclude a specified amount of gross earned income per month up to a maximum annual exclusion. The Student Earned Income Exclusion decreases the amount of countable earned income so it allows eligible SSI recipients to keep more of their SSI check when they work. In many cases, the SEIE allows students to test their ability to work without having any reduction in their monthly SSI check.

Currently, an SSI recipient may qualify for this income exclusion as long as he or she is under age 22 and a student regularly attending school, college, or training designed to prepare him or her for a paying job.

If you have questions or want to know more about the SEIE, contact the Ticket
To Work help line at 866-968-7842.

KNOWvember is Almost Here

We are putting the “know” in November! Follow us on Facebook to learn interesting facts about disability history, culture and the disability rights movement. We’ll do a couple of KNOWvember posts each week to keep you in the know. Find us on Facebook by searching: @DNSWM.

If you want to learn even more, attend our Rise Up workshop in several locations throughout the KNOWvember. See details below.

WORKSHOP
Rise Up: Disability Resistance, History & Pride!

Many of us in the disability community are unaware of the depth of our culture and history and feel shame and stigma instead of pride around our disability identities. Family, friends and human service professionals also have a lack of knowledge of disability history and struggle to find ways to support our journey to disability pride. Let’s change that!

Join us for discussion and activities that promote knowledge of disability history and support the journey to disability pride.

Select the location and date that works best for you. Please pre-register online at bit.ly/dnswmRiseUp2019 or contact Miranda at (269) 345-1516 x120. Let us know if you need an accommodation to participate.
